Game Mechanics

Droplets is a strategic placement, area control, chain reaction game, in which you play droplets of water onto the board. As droplets accumulate in a space, they can trigger a splash, causing all the droplets within to move outwards. These can, in turn, cause other splashes to be triggered – though not always under your control, and not always for your benefit.

Your goal is to splash your droplets onto the fountains around the board, while sending your opponents' down the drain.

The game can be played from 2 to 5 players.

What you need

- Approximately 40 tokens per player, each in different colors/shapes. 10x10mm cubes work just fine, but you can use beads, jewels, or any other small token available.
- An Active Player marker.

Instructions

- In this file you will find 4 different board styles. For each board, a 3+ players is provided, and in the next page you'll find a 2-player version of the same, mirrored. The 2-player version doesn't have the reference for 4-droplet splashes, making it a cleaner interface if you only play with 2 players.
 - o In pages 2 and 3, you'll find the original board. Fountains closest to the center (near the middle of the page) score 1 point, while fountains at both extremes of the board score 2 points.
 - o In pages 4 and 5, there's a smaller triangular version. All fountains are equal, and score 1 point.
 - o In pages 6 and 7, the smallest version of a board I could muster, while keeping it challenging. All fountains are equal and score 1 point. On this board, the game is shorter.
 - o In pages 8 and 9, a square board. Fountains in the center score 1 point, while fountains in the corners score 2 points.
- You only need one board to play, and therefore you only need to print one page, but you can print all, if you want to try all of them.
